FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Optomi Recognized as an OpenCompany

March 5, 2015 • Roswell, Georgia | Optomi, a leading IT staffing company, earned the status of OpenCompany on Glassdoor. The merit signifies that the firm promotes transparency in the workplace. According to Glassdoor, companies that achieve the status of OpenCompany have taken the time to encourage, actively recognize and respond to employee feedback. "We believe in building a culture that genuinely appreciates the strengths of our team members to the extent we refer to them internally as family. Our leadership team strives to build strong relationships so that the door is not only open, but practically non-existent," commented Todd Black, Chief Operating Officer.

Optomi's philosophy is synergistic with that of Glassdoor. Both believe genuine feedback is vital to a corporation's prosperity and growth. "We embrace company transparency fully at Optomi. Everyone on the leadership team has weekly call rotations with each and every employee in the organization to build relationships, share ideas and promote best practices," COO Black says.

Optomi currently has a 4.8 out of 5 overall approval rating with a 98% CEO approval rating. Additional stats include 98% would recommend Optomi to a friend.

Optomi launched in the fourth quarter of 2012 with two offices. It has since grown to seven branches in markets all across the country. The IT staffing firm is slated to extend into at least two new markets by the end of 2015. The expansion continues Optomi's momentum as one of the fastest organically growing IT staffing firms in the US. Headquartered in Atlanta, Optomi has offices in Chicago, Dallas, Baltimore/Washington DC, Orange County, Los Angeles and recently Detroit. Optomi is currently accepting applications through its website for IT positions and has openings for its corporate sales and recruiting positions. Visit www.optomi.com for more information.

Led by co-founders Michael Winwood (formerly the President & COO of Technisource) and Todd Black (formerly the Senior Vice President of Technisource), Optomi is driving tomorrow's technology with today's optimum talent.
